Fittest Athlete

Does the women's hockey team have the fittest athletes?

by Magalie Lafrenière

Since the 1991-1992 school year, when the fittest female athlete of the year award was introduced, a member of the women's hockey team has won it every year but one.

The award recipient is selected by Reg Grant, athletic therapist and strength and conditioning coach for the Concordia Stingers, based on fitness testing performed several times a year.

Grant says it's not science or genetics that allows these athletes to succeed in fitness, but the desire to train and become better athletes.

Concordia women's hockey head coach, Les Lawton, says that the dream for female athletes to succeed at a high level is still alive.

"They can see what it takes to reach a national level and that they have to work hard on and off the ice to reach that level," says Lawton.

From there Lawton says it's been a chain of events. Other players watch the more talented ones train and begin to train themselves. Training has become a team event. Players work together on agility, aerobic and anaerobic training. Every time Lawton walks into the arena or the gym he says he can always spot 2-4 of his players trying to improve their skills through training.

"They are not only more physical and more competitive, but they are also sharper academically and they build character and team togetherness," says Lawton.

Past winners of the award include United States national hockey team member Karyn Bye and Stingers assistant coach, Catherine Bertrand.

Currently, Stinger Captain, Lisa-Marie Breton has won the award three years in a row. Grant says that the All-Canadian "is far superior in fitness to many athletes and is unbelievably committed to training."

Lawton says that traditionally all recipients were "leaders and always did their best to make themselves better as players."

Men's Basketball

Musgrave, Langlois hope to lead Stingers

by John Austen

The Concordia Stingers men's basketball team may be off to a less than auspicious 0-4 start in QSSF league play, but co-captains Gavin Musgrave and Philippe Langlois say it's no time to press the panic button.

The Stingers, coached by John Dore and his assistant Ernie Rosa, have lost twice to the powerful Laval Rouge et Or, and once to the McGill Redmen and Bishop's Gaiters

"Right now we just don't have the firepower or size to compete with a team like Laval," said Musgrave. "But (as the season goes on) we should be able to compete and beat them."

Langlois says the Stingers are a little short on experience. "Everyone has to understand their roles and gain maturity," he said. "It's a learning experience for all of us, but I really believe we have a good team and by the end of the season we'll be surprising a few people."

Langlois is a transfer student from the University of Eastern Kentucky in Richmond. The Varennes native went to CEGEP Montmorency in Laval before getting a U.S. scholarship. The 23-year old point guard, who came back to Montreal last May after a coaching change at Eastern Kentucky, was met with sweeping rosters changes.

"I don't regret going to Kentucky at all- it was a great experience for me," said Langlois. "I mean, I went down there speaking very little English and obviously I had to learn it pretty quick. Everyone was really nice to me. I had a roommate from New York and we got along great."

"The game in the U.S. is bigger and faster," he continued. The knowledge of basketball is, of course, at a very high level as well. I learned a lot and hopefully it will help me with the Stingers. The level of basketball here is good too. There are a lot of good players in this league."

Musgrave is in his fourth year of Exercise Science and second year with the Stingers. The 23-year old guard has learned the benefits of proper time management as he balances his schooling, basketball career and part-time job with the City of Montreal. He works four days a week at the Cote des Neiges Sports Complex where he is in charge of upkeep.

"I must admit that it's sleep that kind of gets sacrificed," said Musgrave. "I work about 23 hours a week, have my classes in the morning and there's about three hours a day devoted to basketball. It's a matter of figuring out what's important. I have to be strict with myself which is good."

Musgrave says he's still learning on the basketball court, as are many of his teammates. "We have a lot of young guys and we're a small team right now," he said. "We lost four starters from last year, so we have a lot of work to do. It's a growing process, but that's OK. Like Phil said, we're going to surprise some people in the second half of the season."

Women's Hockey

The best of both worlds

by Magalie Lafrenière

For Catherine De Abreu and Marie-Claude Allard choosing one sport over another was not a solution. This is why these two female athletes compete in two varsity sports at Concordia, soccer and hockey.

"I like both of them and I couldn't quit either one of them," says Allard.

Third-year De Abreu, a studio arts student and fourth-year Allard, a psychology student, have been playing both sports since they arrived at Concordia.

Allard is a forward in both sports and the assistant captain for the hockey team. She also leads the Canadian university women's hockey league in points. De Abreu is the captain of the women's soccer team, playing midfielder in soccer and is a forward in hockey.

Concordia women's hockey head coach, Les Lawton, thinks that what these two athletes are doing is good as long as the seasons don't run parallel to each other.

"The sports complement each other. The soccer skills pass over to hockey," says Lawton.

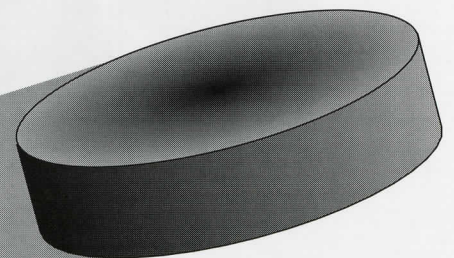

Soccer finishes just as hockey begins but when there is an overlap, havoc settles in. With two practices a day and school, the schedule is grueling and neither athlete has much difficulty falling asleep at night.

Lawton says that he wouldn't recommend this situation for everyone. Athletes must have good fitness and time management skills. Lawton remembers once when De Abreu came in during a hockey game in her soccer uniform, changed, and played the last period of the game.

The athletes must make sacrifices to each team and to their personal lives. But what worries Lawton the most is mental and physical burnout.

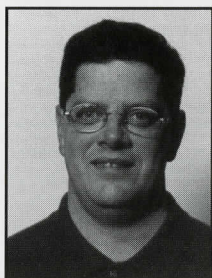

Allard and De Abreu figure they would succumb to burnout if it weren't for each other. They take one day at a time and help one another get through the long physical days.

Women's Basketball

Hard work will carry Stingers a long way

by John Austen

#6 Marie-Pier Veilleux

His team has just one win in its first three league games, but women's basketball coach Keith Pruden says the Stingers' depth will carry them through to a playoff berth this season.

Concordia is in a league with just three other universities—Laval, McGill and Bishop's—with the top three making the playoffs.

"I like the make-up of my team," said Pruden. "We are very deep this year with a very strong bench. It's a good situation because night after night we have new players stepping up to play well."

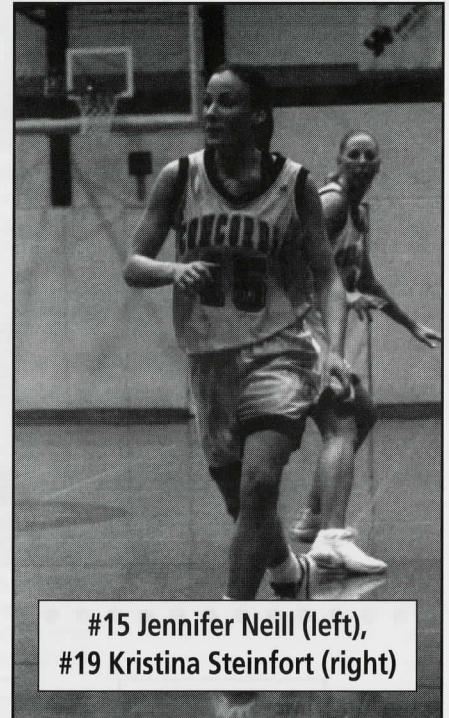

"Last year we didn't come within 35 points of Laval," said Pruden. "We've played them pretty well both times this season and should have won the game we lost in double OT."

Key players for the Stingers include co-captains Marie-Pier Veilleux and Jennifer Neill, as well as Kristina Steinfort—the team's leading scorer. Veilleux, a fourth year guard from Amos (QC.), was selected as a first team All-Star last year and was also the league's defensive MVP.

"They are the big guns for us, there's no doubt about it," said Pruden. "But it's the team as a whole that will make or break us. Any starter we have is capable of scoring at least 20 points in a game."

There are only 15 league games this year, down from 20 last season when the league featured an interlocking schedule with several Ontario schools.

"C'est la vie," said Pruden. "At least only having three other teams in the league makes our prep work a lot easier. Everyone will get to know each other pretty well this season. We will have to be consistent and learn not to take any team or game for granted."

#19 Kristina Steinfort (right)

"The negative is that they don't have athletic scholarships here and that's something we should change," he said. "Western teams have players on scholarships so they're able to concentrate more of their efforts towards basketball. On the plus side though our players are probably more mature and better rounded because of the CEGEP system. My players are really dedicated. They have to combine school with basketball and often with work"

MEN'S HOCKEY

Pride and tradition skates through a new generation

by Magalie Lafrenière

Pressure from past wins and championships is not always what you want to build a new successful team, but this is exactly what Concordia men's hockey head coach Kevin Figsby is looking to find. He is looking to instill a sense of pride and tradition into the present hockey team based on the successes of those who came before them.

"I want the entire history to resurface," says Figsby.

The history, Kevin Figsby says, is probably one of the longest traditions in Canadian university hockey. It is two successful hockey schools merging to become one.

The Sir George Williams University Georgians and their cross-town rivals, the Loyola College Warriors became the Concordia University Stingers in 1975. Before this merger, the Warriors had four conference championships and the Georgians had seven. The two schools came together to win another nine championships in the first ten years following the amalgamation.

That was the history and the Stingers have not won a championship since 1984. In his second year at Concordia Figsby plans to build a new strong hockey program as seen in those merger days and this will be done in part by developing a sense of tradition.

"When I came to Concordia the sense of tradition was lost. It is important to put the link of today with the past. There must be a sense of continuity in any sports organization."

Figsby has started to rebuild his team with young players. Those players are being taught to take pride in Concordia's history as soon as they step on the ice and they will have four to five years to continue the tradition. He has 12 rookies on the team this year, where the average age of the team is 20, with three under 18. He estimates that he has the youngest team in Canadian university hockey. The Stingers must face teams where the average age is 23 and whose players played major junior hockey.

The Concordia players may be young but they are talented. 16 Stingers come from major junior hockey teams. Figsby says he has chosen players who have experienced success in their past team but who also have room to grow as Stingers. Both David Comeau and Mike Tremblay were captains of their junior teams and were draft picks in the NHL but chose to come to Concordia.

Figsby explains that although these players are talented, if they haven't had a NHL contract by the time they are 20, it is unlikely that will play in the NHL. Playing university hockey gives them a faster and more physical game than experienced in the juniors and most importantly they get an education.

Figsby points out that not only is there an athletic tradition at Concordia but an academic one as well. The men's hockey team has had 12 Academic All-Canadians in the last two years. Young French Canadian players come to Concordia speaking one language and leave completely bilingual.

"Concordia offers the best opportunities. A dynamic city to live in and a large variety of accredited programs from which to choose from," says Figsby.

The alumni have also committed themselves to making the Concordia Stingers the number-one hockey program in the country through their new Concordia hockey alumni association. At the recent men's hockey homecoming former team members spoke of their past successes with the new team members.

Figsby expects the team to be extremely competitive, but this is the year to regroup and mature as a hockey program. The head coach has already seen success this season. The Stingers have only lost one game so far against conference teams and sit four points out of second place.

He has also seen success in their work ethic, their pride and their camaraderie. He knows that his efforts are paying off when players are together studying in the dressing room at 9 a.m., when he gets three E-mails a day from prospective players and when his current players sit wide-eyed and listen to alumni speak of the glory days.

"I expect dedication, determination and success every time they put on a Concordia sweater."

Dore, two Stingers take game to Israel

by John Austen

The Middle East may not be a choice tourist destination for many these days, but for two weeks in July it was home to two Stinger basketball players and one veteran coach. Coach John Dore, in his 12th year of coaching at Concordia, was in charge of Canada's men's basketball team at the Maccabiah Games held in Israel. He brought along two members of his own team—Jeff Ber and Jonathan Dresner.

The Maccabiah Games is an Olympic-style competition held every four years for Jewish athletes around the world.

Dore, who coached Canada to a gold medal at the 1997 Games, said this year's event was more about just being there.

"We didn't know until the last minute whether we'd be going or not," said Dore. "We had five or six athletes drop out because of security concerns in that part of the world. "Security was unbelievably tight this time," he continued.

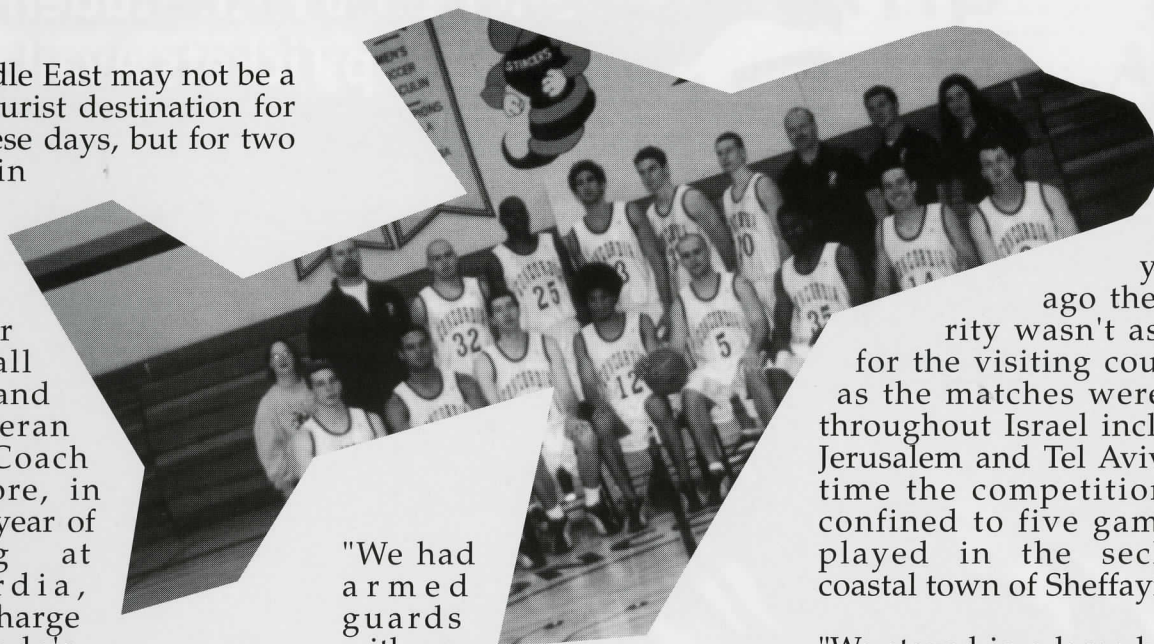

"We had armed guards with us all the time—on the bus ...everywhere."

In 1997, Canada beat out 19 other countries for the gold medal. This time around they finished fifth out of only six teams competing. The Americans went on to win gold. "The competition was almost secondary—and I'm not just saying that because we weren't successful," said Dore. "This was a great experience for everyone involved. The Israelis really appreciated the effort that we put forth just to be over there. I remember when we paid a visit to the Wailing Wall, a captain in the Israeli army came up and hugged me. He was glad we made the trip and had faith that we would be safe."

Five years ago the security wasn't as tight for the visiting countries as the matches were held throughout Israel including Jerusalem and Tel Aviv. This time the competition was confined to five games all played in the secluded coastal town of Sheffayin.

"We stayed in a large hotel in the middle of nowhere," said Dore. "There really wasn't anything to do around there, but that was okay. We understood the situation." Dresner and Ber joined several other players picked from across the country to participate.

"It was an experience they'll both remember," said Dore. "Any time you travel, especially to a place like Israel, it has to affect you. It's a fascinating country. "I've been very fortunate," he continued. "I've been to two World University Games, the Commonwealth Games, and I've been with National Junior Teams. Any time you're able to travel it's great. Seeing all the different customs and traditions in various countries serves as a real eye-opener."

FALL Review

The men's rugby team sweeps up another season

by Magalie Lafrenière

This season the Concordia men's rugby team won their third straight championship and improved their win-loss record to 11-1 from last year's 8-2 record.

The Stingers won nine games in the regular season and dropped only one game to the Sherbrooke Vert et Or. In the Quebec university playoffs, Concordia defeated the Bishop's Gaiters 38-10 in the semifinals and went on to beat the McGill Redmen 11-10 in the final for the provincial title. Mathieu Garston and Jamal Benjouahi led the team in scoring this season with 40 and 38 points respectively and scrumhalf Jason Low had 35 points in tries. Jason Low, Jon Chiniborch, Marty Boutin, Rob Ahnert and George Vouloumanos were named to the QSSF all-star list.

In post-season play, the Stingers travelled once again this year to take on the Atlantic universities with the hope that the exhibition series will lay a foundation for an Eastern Championship composed of Ontario, Quebec and Atlantic teams. They played the University of New Brunswick Varsity Reds in Fredericton and travelled to Antigonish, Nova Scotia to play the St. Francis Xavier University X-Men.

Concordia defeated UNB, the New Brunswick Champions, 31-0 and finished off the series with a 39-17 victory over St. FX, the Nova Scotia finalist.

The women's rugby team had an identical record to that of last year. They posted a 6-2 record during the regular season with both losses to McGill. The Stingers defeated the Bishop's Gaiters 73-0 in the semifinal before losing in the QSSF final 60-0 to cross-town rivals, the McGill Martlets. Captain Sommer Christie earned All-Canadian honours and joined teammates Lynda Domazet, Leigh Garland and Joanne Auger on the QSSF all-star team. Christie led the team this season with 58 points.

The men's soccer team showed much promise this season. The 15 international players on the team added much depth and skill to the team. The Stingers were undefeated in the regular season with nine wins and three ties. Unfortunately, the team lost 2-1 on penalty kicks in the QSSF semifinal to the Université du Québec à Montréal Citadins. Rookie forward Fabien Thomas was named to the All-Canadian first team and Ammar Badawieh and Stefan Takac were named to the second team. Frank Pons joined them on the QSSF all-star team.

The Concordia Stingers' women's soccer team worked hard this season posting a 6-8-1 record. They were able to secure a playoff position but lost 4-0 to McGill in the QSSF semifinal. Forward Jerusha Osborne was named to the second QSSF all-star team.

The Concordia football team continued to march their way up after a transitional year in 2000 and improved their regular season record to 5-3 from 2-6 last year. A highlight of the season was a 20-8 defeat of the Laval Rouge et Or in the first game of the season. The Stingers advanced to the playoffs but lost to the McGill Redmen 11-8 in the QIFC semifinal. Jean-Michel Paquette, Brad Remus, Adam Heming, Alex Oliveira, Dave Aiken and Burke Dales were named to the QIFC all-star list and Dales was honoured as the punter for the All-Canadian team.
